

WAR FOR 1812 FLAG.

CITY HALL JANITOR SUED.

One Asa B. Gardiner and Mrs. Morehouse Had a Row Over.

An 1912 American flag, 12 by 20 feet in size, and bearing signs of much repair, was the centre of interest resterday in the 8th District Municipal Court, where the question of its possession was disputed by Colonel Asa Bird Gardiner, for the Society of the War of 1812, and Mrs. Matilda Morehouse, who is said to be a colonel of the Washing-ton Continental Guards. Mrs. Morehouse was plaintiff in an action against Martin J. Keese, janitor at the City Hall. At the time that the body of Hiram Cronk, last survivor of the War of 1812, lay in state there last menth Mrs. Morehouse brought down the flag to be hung in the building for the occasion, and when, at 10:30 o'clock on the night after the services, she appeared before Mr. Keese and asked for the flag, he refused, saying that a claim had been | ing. made for it by Asa Bird Gardiner for the Society of the War of 1812.

Mrs. Morehouse, gowned in black, with a numbe of patriotic society badges pinned on her waist, was so stirred by the sight of the flag, which she had not seen since that memorable night when Mr. Keese refused it to her, that Judge Moore was forced to interrupt her testimony with the request: "Don't grow so aloquent over it."

She testified, with a pronounced German accent, that the flag was promised to her by Captain John G. Norman five or six years ago. It was mislaid, however, until a few months ago, and it was not until December 2, 1905, that she received a letter from the Park Department saying that the flag had been found and that she might have it by calling for it. The next day her husband went for it, she said, and it was not out of her care until the day of the Cronk funeral. "Were you in Continental uniform on that of

"No. I saw the statement, but I am not remponsible for the mistakes of the press."

Dr. Morehouse, a practising physician, of No. 262 West Mith-st., the plaintiff's husband, testified that he was present when Captain Norman gave the fing to Mrs. Morehouse, in December, 1895, on his

"You and your husband have been so kind to me in my sickness," he quoted Captain Norman as saying, "that I give to you my jewels, my sword and my flag. You will find it, I think, in the Park Department."

Frederick William Richey, an officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, living at No. 126 Grand-st., Jersey City, said that living at No. 126 Grand-st., Jersey City, said that the flag was made by the McFadden Flag Company, and was presented to Captain Norman, and that he was on hand for the presentation. He said that nothing was paid for the flag, but that there was a stipulation that it should be hoisted on holidays on Fort Fish, in Central Park. The inscription, "Veterans of the War of 1812," he declared, was put on the flag late.

Colonel Asa Bird Gardiner was the first witness for the defendant, and, after replying to questions concerning the organization and incorporation of the corps of artillery, State of New-York, constituting the Society of the War of 1812, he fails:

constituting the Society of the War of 1812, its said:

"We had two flags, which we were accustomed to raise on holidays at the Eattery and the Block House, in Central Park. Gradually these flags became whipped at the ends from use, and in 1881, General Dally came to my office, and we decided to order two new flags. Captain Norman was designated to purchase them in behalf of the Veterans of 1812, of which I was vice-commander. They were purchased, and the one for the block house was put in the custody of Captain Norman. His stewardship terminated in June, 1885. Before that he came to me and said that he had been performing the duty of flag raising since 1890, and that he had advanced some money for the flags. He asked to be remunerated, and on June 20, 1831, he received $100 from the treasurer of our organization.

he had advanced some money for the flags. He asked to be remunerated, and on June 29, 1821, he received 5:00 from the treasurer of our organization. He then handed over three flags, one much the worse for wear, some beits, pictures, etc. "The flag was taken from the office of Adjutant Johnson, on Broadway, to Central Park, for the raising on the Fourth of July, 1895, but could not be found after the ceremony.

"I made inquiries of the Park Commissioners and bould get no satisfaction, so I went to the Board of Aldermen and said we had raised the flags now for some years as a matter of patriotic duty, and we thought the city ought to supply the flags.

"The flags were in future so provided by the city, and we had no further need to use our own."

The widow of Capitain Norman was called to the stand and was unable to identify as her husband's the signature of the receipt for $100. She said that that amount had been given him, but for the funeral of General Dally—not for himself.

Janitor Keese substantiated the story of his refusal to give up the flag at the City Hall to Mrs. Morehouse.

The judge reserved his decision, and Colonel Gardiner took possession of the flag until decision is rendered. He declares it is worth about $1167, while Mrs. Morehouse sets its value at $100.

Why, when there are so many good looking women who are ready and willing to marry, should men choose the distinctly plain ones? This is a problem that has kept many a pretty girl awake o' nights. The number of exceedingly unprepossessing women who have made and are all the time carrying off first class matrimonial prizes is something to make the observer sit up when he thinks The pretty girl who sees herself passed by for one of the other kind has many reasons to offer why it should be so, one of the most in-genious being that plain women make up their minds to marry some one and deliberately cultivate their will power and the art of pleasing to that end. Others assert that the plain woman captivates by her kindness, sweet temper and sympathy-for every homely woman knows by instinct that she dare not attempt the pert, airy and often disagreeable manners which are condoned in her pretty sis-ter. Still, unless one holds that ugly women are cleverer than pretty ones, there is no charm or art -except that of physical beauty-which the handsome daughter of Eve may not command quite as uch as the other kind, so this leaves the problem about where it was at the start. The really important thing, however, is that the plain girl does get there, when by every canon of propriety she should be left behind.

mother and grandmother," continues this authority. "With them Senday was a day of rest or of idleness, but nowadays Sunday is really as hard a day as the housewife has in all the week. Instead of the cold luncheon and only two meals of the long ago, a more elaborate breakfast, dinner and supper than for the rest of the week are the rule. There is often company at some time during the day or evening, and there is little time for picking up the house. The result is that on Monday morning there is little to eat in the larder; the entire house needs to be straightened, if not to be actually swept and dusted, and there are all the best clothes of husband and children to be put away in good order for the next Sunday. So Monday should be spent in looking these over to see if they are in perfect condition, doing whatever mending or removing of spots is necessary; in preparing a supply of food that will last well over Tuesday, so that upon washday itself there be no vecessity for cooking anything new; in putting the house in order so that there will be little of this to do, except to make the beds and wash the dishes. Best of all, Monday gives one a splendid opportunity to look over the soiled clothes and prepare them properly for the laundering. Missing buttons should be sewn into place, torn places darned, and especially wornout stockings mended, for any article that goes into the wash torn is almost sure to come out needing the proverbial nine stitches where one would have answered the purpose. It is a good idea also to wash the flannels and hosiery on Monday, as they have to be done separately and the work seems less difficult than when it is included in the regular washing. evening, and there is little time for picking up the

ST. VINCENT'S BAZAAR.

Two Thousand Tots Attend in a Body-Proceeds for New Hospital.

Sister Veronica St. Joseph, smiling encourage-ment, opened out the top of her indigo blue pillow slip engagingly to show the visitor how pretty all "Have a grab?" the little bundles looked done up in newspaper and snuggling together inside. Half a dozen other Sisters were going about, some with white and some with blue pillow slips, but all of them filled with blue pillow silps, but an or them with toys, waiting to be grabbed.

The big courtyard of St. Vincent's Hospital resounded with squeaks and whistles and rattles that had come out of the grab bag, and the gravel walks and lower corridors were carpeted with newspaper by the thousand happy wrappings thrown there by two thousand happy children from the Roman Catholic schools. Every year the children come, spending their pennies layishly for the cause of the hospital, and making each day of St. Vincent's annual bazaar a gala day. This year the proceeds of the bazaar go to the

From the iron balconies above, the patients, looking wan and languid in their blue robes, with here and there a bandage showing white, peered down wistfully upon the merrymakers.

The Sisters, in their black cloth habits and shiny black caps, were kept very busy serving their thirsty little customers. The lemonade came out in bucketfuls, and though it went by tumblerfuls it went very fast.

In the hall all sorts of bric-a-brac, fancy articles, dolls and the small articles of bazaars in general found a ready sale, the Sisters being assisted by Miss May Lyons, the Misses Dunn, Miss May Bird, Miss Katherine Brady, Miss Cotter, Miss Wynne, Mrs. C. F. Orben and others. The nurses of the hospital also have a table, with Miss Katherine Sanborn in charge, the proceeds of which will go to furnish a room in the new building for the use of sick nurses.

The bazaar will come to an end Thursday evening. Thus far the proceeds are highly satisfactory, the Sisters said yesterday.

MONEY RECEIVED.

Mrs. Belle G. Dutcher, president of the Arlington (N. Y.) junior branch, has sent a check for $40 16 for the summer outing fund. This sum was made at the blossom bazaar recently held by this branch, of which a report will be given in full later. Mrs. P. F. Frost has sent $1.75 for badges for the Mothers' Sunshine Club; "Two Friends," 50 cents, as a monthly contribution; Miss Inez A. Godman, of Connecticut, $2 for Sunshine.

CAMP CLOSED.

Dr. John E. Ennis, of the Narcoossee T. S. S. branch, has closed his consumptive camp for this season. It consisted of a tent colony on his lawn of afflicted ones who have found the dry, warm climate and the diet prescribed most beneficial. Dr. Ennis can feel that his humane experiment has been a success. He writes:

I have ascertained the actual cost of boarding patients, including the attendance, and in future will put rates at actual cost. Applications for admittance come in aimost daily, and it is painful to refuse them. Just now I am at work trying to get some State legislation to prevent extension of the disease. Thousands of consumptives arrive every fall in Florida, occupy rooms at hotels and boarding houses, or rent furnished cottages. On their departure no fumigation is done, and such quarters become a trap to to catch any susceptible person. The legislation I propose is to compel landlords or owners of houses letting rooms to tubercular cases to report at once to the State Board of Health.

Health.

It is a crime for any civilized nation to permit the distribution of the bacilli of tuberculosis in communities where it does not exist or among the working classes in cities, when contagion is so easily prevented.

A PLEASANT DAY.

Mrs. Mary E. Norton, of Wethersfield, Conn. who has been an invalid so many years, writes: "Will you kindly thank for me all the dear T. S. S. friends who so lovingly came by mail to greet me on my birthday? The visits were delightful, and will cheer me for many days. I will reply to all who gave their names. One of the girls from the Bloomsburg (Penn.) Friendly Society, who sent me one of the invalid bars, wrote me a sweet letter. I received eighteen letters and three books as birthday greetings, and I am truly grateful for these sunny remembrances."

ACCEPTABLE READING.

President of the T. S. S.: I wish to thank you for your kindness in sending so much reading to my invalid daughter. She enjoys the books, maga-zines and clippings. A. Conan Doyle is a favorite with her. The dainty box of Surshine powders were read and admired, and "passed on," and the other reading will be, soon. Sincerely yours, Farmington, Me. Mrs. EMMA L. GREAT GROWTH OF P. E. CHURCH.

Ten Times Nearest Rival, Says Presbyterian Pastor-Praises Bishop Potter.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas Reed Bridges, of the Sec ond Presbyterian Church, of Newark, read a paper yesterday at the Presbyterian Ministers' Association at No. 156 5th-ave, on "The Causes of the Growth and Present Prosperity of the Episcopal Church in New-York City."

Official statistics quoted show that, even as compared with the Presbyterian Church, the growth of the Protestant Episcopal Church is about 10 to 1, and the Presbyterian Church makes a better showing than any other Protestant denomination. In round numbers Dr. Bridges said the number of communicants in the Presbyterian Church had in-creased in this city in the last fourteen years only about twenty-five hundred, while in the Episcopal Church the increase had been about twenty-five thousand. 1, and the Presbyterian Church makes a better thousand.

The speaker said the personality of Bishop Potter had not a little to do with this. The second cause stated was the concentration of power in a few great central churches. Dr. Bridges gave as the third cause the form of-service and worship.

Deckhand Quiets Panic and Puts Out Blaze Alone in Spite of Burns.

Not until yesterday was it known that Thomas McIntyre, a deckhand on a 3th-st. ferryboat, extinguished, singlehanded, a fire that broke out in an automobile on board of the boat on a morning trip from Manhattan to Long Island City. The automobile belonged to A. T. Hedges, a stock broker, and was in charge of William Tilford, of No. 229

East 57th-st. The boat was in midstream when the blaze appeared, and was crowded, many passengers being women and children.

One man got excited and asked for a life preserver, and McIntyre told him to "shut up" and not frighten the women and children. Once the flames shot out and burned McIntyre on the hands and arms, but he did not retreat.

The work was taken up this morning in company formation, in evolutions of the squad, which comprehend some of the fundamental principles in the new drill regulations. The movements by "fours," so long a formation under military tactics, are superseded in the new regulations by those of the "squad," which is of the same numerical strength, but of an increased distance between front and rear ranks of forty inches. This increased distance between ranks and the change from a wheel to a turn, in which the on the new line, require some practice to secure uniformity of action and to overcome old habits formed in wheeling. It has all been graphically laid out on the floor of the mess hall by General Joseph G. Story, at the request of Colonel William H. Chapin, so that a set of fours may be placed on the diagram and the turning executed by each man following the lines of the morning when the battaliens were drilled in battalion manoeuvres. Both of these drills were exceptionally well carried out, and were highly commended by inspecting officers.
